

January 2017 Reflection

Welcome to the Joey Room. It has been a busy and productive month. It has been a revolving door of endless orientation, meeting new families and coming together as a group to work and try and make a smooth and happy transition. Roukaya, Barb and I have created a warm and inviting environment where the children can get lost in their imagination and play because that's where the learning truly begins. From our sensory mat with lots of bits and bobs to awaken our children senses, to our climbing frame jungle gym, building blocks, musical instruments and our outdoor play area, there is something for everybody to enjoy and learn from until we learn the children's interests and plan for the room according to age and stage of development. The children that have just started are beginning to enjoy and explore the room while also getting used to the educators and making new friends along the way. We are still learning each other's routines and cues. We are excited for a wonderful and fun year.

Links to the National Quality Standards: Quality area 1 Educational Program and Practice and TRCC Philosophy

