

March 2017 Reflection

It's March and the last group of children to orientate has all started. We have been lucky that majority of the children are starting to settle in and familiarize themselves into their new environment and is bonding beautifully with the educators in the room. We see that the children are beginning to recognise each other and are enjoying each other's company. A lot of the activities in the room e.g. - home corner, sensory mat, book corner, music instrument etc. are group based and it has been wonderful to watch them grow and learn with one another.

Due to the nice weather we have been able to take our sensory play outdoors. We have been enjoying the sand pit and tan bark, and you could find us in there loving the feeling and trying to eat it. We are also getting used to a bigger outdoor space and new surroundings as well as sharing the space with the possum children.

Links to the National Quality Standards: Quality area 1 Educational Program and Practice and TRCC Philosophy

